Why Should You Become a VSI Certified Installer Company?

In today's competitive market, customer satisfaction and quality assurance are vital to your company's success. If you're looking for ways to boost your reputation and marketability as a top-notch vinyl siding installation company, then we invite you to become a Certified Installer Company through the Vinyl Siding Institute's (VSI) Certified Installer Program.

As a Certified Installer Company, you will receive independent, third-party verification of your company's vinyl siding installation practices and knowledge, giving you a crucial edge over the competition. VSI certification adds credibility to your work and can give your customers confidence that the job will be done right the first time, by trained professionals who use industry-approved installation techniques.

Vinyl siding installation companies can qualify for certification if they have at least one VSI Certified Trainer or Installer per crew present where vinyl siding is being installed, as well as an established program for the ongoing training and re-certification of installers. Certified Installer Companies must also implement a quality control program that has been reviewed and approved as meeting mini-minimum program requirements by the Program Administrator, Architectural Testing, Inc. of York, Pennsylvania.

Once certified, your company will be added to VSI's website registry, and can also use VSI's Certified Installer Company logo and marketing materials to promote your status and educate consumers on the benefits of using VSI Certified Installer Companies and Certified Installers.

To learn more about the VSI Certified Installer Program, or to apply to become a Certified Installer Company, visit VSI's website at <www.vinylsiding.org>.

More than 3,600 experienced vinyl siding installers and trainers have become certified through the VSI Certified Installer Program. In order to receive certification, installation professionals must undergo a rigorous course of study and examination on the proper installation techniques for vinyl siding, soffit, and accessories, based on the vinyl siding installation standard ASTM D4756.
